A disaster

I really enjoy point and click adventures. It's by far my favourite genre. This title was enjoyable for the short time I was able to play it.

Unfortunately, I cannot play this game beyond the first 40 minutes or so as there is a fatal crash that I cannot get beyond. I get to a position where I have to give a bone to a lab technician and the game just crashes. What's more it freezes my computer and I can't do anything other than switch it off by the button. It is advertised as playable on Windows 8, but this is not true.

I read on the discussions that many people have had the same problem and yet the developer continues to sell it unpatched. Shocking.

Most definitely NOT recommended.. i want just 1 ragdoll controllable by a xbox 1 controller and for windows 7. LOVE IT..... DO NOT BUY. The multiplayer is dead. Pretty much nobody has played multiplayer since maybe a few months after the game was released.. Bizarre, super SUPER short, but strangely interesting. If you are an intuitive player then this will take no more than 20 minutes. I actually played it twice just to make sure I didn't miss anything. At $.99 it is just the right price for the experience.. 7/10

Home Run Solitaire is a solid solitaire experience. As you complete levels and earn money, you can use it to buy both passive and active upgrades to help you in subsequent levels. The game is a good length, and unlike the Revills other game Chef Solitaire, you begin unlocking your final upgrades towards the end of the experience rather than about halfway through. Although there are more than four active abilities to unlock, you can take only four into a level with you. This is neat, and allows you to create a "build" that you prefer - however, I felt that there were clear winners when it came to these abilities. There were two abilities that dropped in a card that you could immediately use, one that dropped in a wild card, and of course the lightning bat, that removes all of the top cards in each stack on the board.

The "humor" in the game is typically puns on the names of the opposing teams by one of the announcers, Frank. I suppose it was amusing enough, although rather groan-worthy. Additionally, there were times when I wondered if developer Revills Games had ever played baseball, after listening to some of the things that were highlighted by the announcers.

If you like this sort of solitaire game, you really can't go wrong here. Just like in Chef Solitaire, the Revills have little mini-games that pop up from time to time as you play. I thought these were generally OK, although your mileage may vary. One very small gripe I had was that there were achievements for activating certain inferior abilities 40 times. I tend to like picking up the achievements as I go, but in my opinion, the abilities I was asked to activate were inferior to others that I had available. For instance, the soda can always drops an Ace when activated, but when compared to abilities that drop cards that can always be used, or a wild card? It pales in comparison. I felt the same way about the foam finger, which shuffles all of the cards on the board - there were times that I would use it and still not have a play. Therefore, if you want to snag all the achievements, you might have to self-handicap for a little while.. A Valken clone with mouse aiming. Good for a few hours. I recommend Gigantic Army over this, though.. Everything is dark and the only monster is me.

pls send help.. F*CKING AMAZING GAME, this is no joke i have got this 4 of my friends and am playing it regularly. for people who say im joking they are lying and want more of this game to be made with DLC. 100% Broken on Mac and has been for years. Do not buy.

i played the card game many time and i do not always have a partner so this is perfect for online or even single player games its a prefect translation of the physical game lots of decisions making combat health crystals to defeat your opponent.. If you like puzzle games, you should play Gyromancer. Period.. This is a great little adventure. Be sure to check it out.. Not at least fun, Hard to control and no tutorial to know how to play! Might be better later down the road, but for now I don't recommend it. Looks promising though.. Is cute that they wanted to add mystery and challenge to the game. But . . . most of the time you don't even know what your people are doing. You can't control resource allocation so the bloody gold mine shuts down cause someone stole the gold so it leads to a paradox situation. If I gonna play a game of anarchy and watch people defy your instructions √ not listen to you, I would go play with my niece. It's great to have a backgammon game like this on Steam. The AI is a little bit easy to beat, but it's still fun to play.

The game is very good-looking and polished, but it could use some automated functionality, as it gets a little tiring having to select a piece and then select its destination when there's only one place it might go. How 'bout a double click?

At any rate, if you like the game of backgammon, you'll enjoy this.. Wow. This is like ikaruga on steroids.

This game is too much for me. It appears to me that the 1st and 3rd game are the best in the series imho as they dont have the polarity mechanic and they focus on 'just' dodging bullets and shooting stuff. But i do see why so many people differ on this and consider this one the best in the exceed series as it sure gives you a lot of challenge. Changing polarity back and forth sure gives a lot of extra things to worry about and thus extends the shelf-life of this game a lot.

I'll recomend it still though. You got to see this game series yourself to believe it. Pure madness. but underneath there is pure gold that every fan of the genre should have in their libraries.. If you like to get insulted by Vets who play this game and a community more Toxic than League i totally recommend this game.
