This is the best godamn thing to grace this miserable planet. Thank you for this nirvana.. This add on is absolutely fantastic. It is very value for money with regards to the number of locomotives you get. All 5 locomotives have been used in past Steam addons but I find that two of the locomotives exceed quality of the others. These being Just Trains' Gresley V2 and the RSC Thompson B1, I would also like to mention that despite its age the O4 is also a good addon. The route itself is pretty detailed too. I would like to mention however that scenery is a little sparse in places and could be improved.

I would say this add-on deserves 4.5\forall Stars. 3 out of 5, its fun, but not a true Jane's game. Jane's used to make hardcore flight combat simulator type games, not this time. This game, while fun, is a port of a console small downloadable game. At first I didn't like the game, I felt cheated, but in the end I had fun playing through the short campaign. This game and Hawx 1 are the last of the good arcade flight combat games. For more realism play DCS World. This game is fun, but shouldn't cost more than $5 in my opinion.. I have done a review on this game before. However upon the new update and seeing the game slightly differently, I want to change my thoughts on the game slightly.

I still maintain that this is a good game. What isn't so good is the way it's being handled (much like Wreckfest from what I've read). The game has been on a slightly less than steady decline for awhile now. Some of this has to do with the fact that finding players in the lobby is difficult, the wait time to find a lobby in the first place is annoying and that the amount of updates for the game have been really (really, really) slow. Of course there are times when games have less updates than what the community would ideally want.

However TrackDay manager has passed crossed that line by a big margin now. If you want this game then I recommend you understand these three things in order to enjoy it.

Finding other players that aren't AI is going to be hard: I don't know if there is some sort of Steam group right now that has players that will play this game on a semi-regular basis, but if there isn't then that made it that little bit harder to find players to race with.

Finding lobbies to race on takes awhile, have patience: It takes about 110 seconds for the game to find a lobby, I know it's ridiculous but just make a snack or something in the meantime. Maybe watch a TV for a few seconds.

There are other people that have been playing since the game's releasing, so they may have better cars than you: Try not to get too frustated if you can't beat other players, they probably have better cars anyway. Just try your best and take anything above last as a win.

This is by far from being a terrible game. It's not even that far from being a great game. What holds it back is the lack of updates the game has been getting. I do recommend this game but only if you understand what I've listed above. This game isn't hard to enjoy but it can be difficult to not get very annoyed at it.

In short: It's a good (and quite enjoyable) game. However it needs to be handled better than it currently is.. you know i am going to beat this game and yes i will get the badge and when i die i will die of cardiac arrest thanks to you making this \u2665\u26

The only downsides I can mention are:

- -If you play it you will probably notice that some featuers seem to be missing or ended up cut out, but nothing that compromises the experience (although it makes you carry a lot of trash in hope of future developments that never come);
- -the endings seem to have been rushed given that they feel quite abrupt and not as well developed as some of the longer quests.

All in all, given the price tag, this is an awesome purchase. Good little DLC for 2$ if you don't know the basic tech side behind your computer, but you would love to. Sadly it's only available on steam exclusively for CPUcores owners (which cost 15$), but on the other hand, it's a little addition for your CPUcores.

However, tech people don't need this app (like myself) i'm working with computers a lot, and i use program called CPU-Z, because it's giving me more info about the hardware.

If you are tech kinda guy like me, who was looking for CPU-Z kinda program on steam, you should understand that, again, it's only available on steam exclusively for CPUcores owner, and be aware, that this app is only showing basic stuff: CPU (name, model @ Ghz), GPU (name, model, amount of GBs), RAM (amount of GBs, name, model @ Mhz), OS, Motherboard (name, model), Storage (name, model, amount of GBs), Audio and Network. You can create PNG of you specs, or copy it as text in your clipboard to share.

This DLC is doing what it should, but again, tech kinda people like me don't need this app, the only reason why you can buy it if you guy like me, is just to support the developer.

I want SHA to be like an Early Access game, you are receiving a working alpha\prototype in the beginning, and then CPU-Z like awesome program at the end.

If you're a video game historian I'd like to direct you to this game because it was unquestionably the first "early access" scam game on Steam, long before early access was even a thing. Not only is it genuinely just an awful game with painfully bad controls and levels that feel like they were designed completely at random with zero playtesting, but we were promised that this was the first chapter out of three, and that the game would be updated with the next two totally free of charge. Guess what never happened?

This game is not worth a single penny. This is a not a "so bad that it's good" game. You will not find anything about it ridiculous or amusing. At best you will be bored, but more likely you will be frustrated. Do not buy this game under any circumstances.. This is a pretty fun game to play through, it's very well put together and runs well, the atmosphere of the game is crafted really nicely with the art style and the background noises, the combat works nicely and I honestly had a really good time with this game and I recommend trying it out. Super intense and fun.. A fun little game with some good laughs, worth the money for the laughs it brings. Check out my video on it!
